

Edward Sparrow is the Chair of the City of London Law Society.

The Society represents the interests of its member lawyers (16,000+) and law firms (50+) practising in the City of London and Canary Wharf. The Society is not a regulatory body. The main issues engaging Edward over the last few years have been: Brexit, social mobility and access to justice. Edward is also a part time consultant with international law firm Ashurst, having been there for nearly 45 years, as a disputes partner for more than 35 years. He has acted in most types of commercial disputes, including financial services and professional regulation. He is a Member of the Bank of England's Enforcement Decision Making Committee and has a number of charitable roles. He is married with 7 children and 7 grandchildren.